A HISTORY OF ATTITUDES AND BEHAVIOURS TOWARD ANIMALS IN EIGHTEENTH- AND NINETEENTH-CENTURY BRITAIN
Anthropocentrism and the Emergence of Animals

Rob Boddice

With a Foreword by
Boria Sax

The Edwin Mellen Press
Lewiston*Queenston*Lampeter
Contents

Foreword by Boria Sax
1. Introduction: Human-animal relations and the discipline of history
   - What is an animal? An historical question
   - Historical 'progress'
   - Cruelty
   - Animals
   - Pain
   - Focus, structure and sources

2. Neoclassicism and animals in the eighteenth century
   - Some myths and a chasm
   - Thomas Taylor the Platonist
   - The influence of Plutarch and Lucretius
   - Mixed reason: Epicurus in an eighteenth-century quest for animal souls
   - Liminal reason: Platonic irony, Gulliver and the Houyhnhnms
   - Conclusion: Taylor's vindication

3. Cruelty to animals and the 'great chain of being'
   - Background to the early-modern humane movement
   - A media cause célèbre
   - The 'great chain of being' in popular culture
   - Cruelty, the 'great chain' and philosophy

4. The Bentham Myth and early legislative attempts
   - The Myth, or what scholars say about Jeremy Bentham
   - Myth busting: what Bentham actually said, and what it meant
   - The original Myth: William Whewell and John Stuart Mill
   - Real historical forces: Lawrence, Wilberforce, Erskine